

SCOTT'S GADGET OF THE MONTH

Kreative Power's Powramid Electrical Power Bank

www.kreativepower.com

With everyday needs for smart device charging, sometimes counters, desktops and other areas start to look like a spaghetti bowl with power strips and extension cords. Travelling today requires multiple charging outlets, even when it is just you alone. While charging mats provide a clean solution, you still have to add the extra bulk and weight to your device for compatibility. And then there is the issue of power conditioning and surge suppression. While many transformer based chargers do a reasonable job of handling small surges and spikes, even the best have a difficult time suppressing a strong electrical event.

Enter Kreative Power's Powramid. This is an elegant device based on the octagonal placement of outlets in a circular device with onboard surge suppression and noise filtration. These devices come in a variety of color schemes. Small, simple and well-engineered, I have these in my office, my Den on an end table for Danis and the kids to charge their phones and iPad's and I travel with one for convenient power access in hotels. Many of my friends have purchased them for the same reasons and have found them to be indispensable.

Check out their website and the links provides to web retailers for their products!